

What is the status of the LEARN Act?

The LEARN Act has been introduced in both Houses of Congress. It has the support of both chairmen (House & Senate education committees) and is basically being thought of as something that will go into the new ESEA.

However, there is a small chance if ESEA isn't acted on in 2010 that it might move independently. IRA and several other groups have been working hard with the cosponsors in crafting this legislation.
